Klamath Basin Food System Assessment

A survey about access to food for Tribal people in the Klamath Basin
Thank you for participating in the Klamath Basin Food System Assessment!

This survey was designed by Tribal employees and UC Berkeley researchers to hear your opinions about how to improve access to food for Tribal people and document the current state of the food system in your community.

Good access to food refers to the ready availability of nutritious and culturally appropriate foods, and the physical, financial, and legal ability to acquire these foods throughout the year.

Does your local food system provide good access to healthy and culturally appropriate food, or are there things that could be changed?

This survey will ask questions about your food shopping and consumption, your opinion on food assistance programs, your experience with growing or raising your own food, and your use of and demand for traditional Native American foods. We will also ask some background and personal questions to help us paint a picture of the community.

There is no ‘right’ or ‘wrong’ answer to these questions. Your responses, based on your experiences, observations, or feelings, will be most helpful to us as we try to identify community-generated solutions for improving access to food for Tribal families.

This survey is anonymous. If you don’t want to answer a question or you don’t know how to answer a question, just skip it. If you have any questions about this survey or project, please contact Jennifer Sowerwine at jsowerwi@berkeley.edu or (510) 664-7043, or:
