

AP Exam Equivalency Chart

Your AP credits must appear on your UC Berkeley transcript before they can be used to meet major requirements. While your major may accept AP exams to satisfy a major requirement, consult with your major advisor to discuss what impact this may have on you. Remember that substitution is optional and students more often struggle with the subsequent biology, chemistry, physics, and math courses if they don't take the introductory courses at UC Berkeley. Pre-Med students: Please note that most medical and pre-health graduate programs do not accept AP units for pre-med requirements.

For information about using AP credit to satisfy the Reading and Composition Requirement and the American History and American Institutions Requirement, please see their Berkeley Academic Guide pages (<https://guide.berkeley.edu>).

For information about using AP Credit to satisfy the Foreign Language Requirement for the Environmental Economics & Policy Major, please see the Letters & Science website (<https://lsadvising.berkeley.edu/foreign-language>).

Advanced Level (A-Level) Exam Equivalency Chart

Your A-Level credits should appear on your UC Berkeley transcript before they can be used to meet major requirements. The UC system only accepts certain A-Level exams from certain testing providers. Please refer to the University of California website on A-Level exams.

While the major may accept A-Levels to satisfy a major requirement, consult with your major advisor to discuss what impact this may have on you. Remember that substitution is optional and students more often struggle with the subsequent biology and chemistry courses if they don't take the introductory courses at UC Berkeley. Pre-Med students: Please note that most medical and pre-health graduate programs do not accept A-Level units toward admission requirements.

For information about using A-Level credit to satisfy the Reading and Composition Requirement and the American History and American Institutions Requirement, please see their Berkeley Academic Guide pages (<https://guide.berkeley.edu>).

For information about using A-Level credit to satisfy the Foreign Language Requirement for the Environmental Economics & Policy Major, please see the Letters & Science website (<https://ls.berkeley.edu/foreign-language>).
